Headline:
Rain and snow tonight and early Thursday, dry by afternoon.

This Evening and Tonight:
Dry this evening with a widespread frost. Rain and snow will push in from the northwest in the early hours. Much of this will be light, but lying snow for some and an increasing ice risk. Minimum temperature -5 deg C (23 deg F).

Thursday:
Patchy rain and snow dying out through the morning. The afternoon will become largely dry with some sunshine, although the Borders may stay cloudy. Staying rather cold. Maximum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Isolated snow showers on Friday, otherwise bright and cold. Patchy light rain pushing in from the west on Saturday. Breezy and milder by Sunday, brightness in the east.
